Beneath the Surface / Hidden Place

A photographic project (2007–10) investigating the physical and emotional effects of economic change and regeneration in Scotland.

Submitted by Nicky Bird
Output No. 1
This photographic project (2007-10) investigated the physical and emotional effects of economic change and regeneration. This involved close collaboration with individuals and communities across Scotland whose surroundings have undergone significant upheaval - whether caused by a decline in heavy industry, or housing regeneration.

The resulting body of work included 20 digital montages, which deployed two kinds of photographic language in articulating change to place: the family snap, and a contemporary landscape photograph. The contribution to knowledge is embodied, in the first instance, within these images.

Selected examples each have a caption that includes: the name of a collaborator; the location; and two dates. Image and caption together demonstrate a transferable methodology that evokes history within living memory connected to a changed, erased or hidden place.

Output 1

To view the full series, see Appendices on DVD and publication in the physical portfolio.
Nicky Bird & Jan McTaggart: Foxbar, Paisley
Back of Annan Drive, 1977? / Back of Springvale Drive, 2007
Nicky Bird & Jan McTaggart: Foxbar, Paisley
Front-garden, 3 Annan Drive, 1978/
Springvale Drive, 2007
Nicky Bird & Mary Kennedy: Lethanhill, Dunaskin
Middle Pad, Lethanhill, 1930s? / Lethanhill, 2008
Nicky Bird & Mary Kennedy: Lethanhill, Dunaskin
Lethanhill Old School, 1940-1? / Lethanhill, 2008
Nicky Bird & Drew Johnstone: Burnton, Dalmellington
59 Burnton, 1929-30? / 2008
Nicky Bird & Drew Johnstone: Burnton, Dalmellington
59 Burnton, 1937-38? / 2008
Nicky Bird & Lesley Weir: Ardler, Dundee
Multi Park, 1977-78 / Scotscaig Road, 2007
Nicky Bird & Lesley Weir with Martin Peter: Ardler, Dundee
In the Squarey, Rosemount Road, 1973 / Hazelhead, Rosemount Road, 2007
Nicky Bird & Lesley Weir: Ardler, Dundee
Grass Area outside Gleneagles Court, Summer 1972 / Scotsraig Court, 2007
Nicky Bird & Mark Scott: Ardler, Dundee
The 'Fieldy', Summer 1973? / Turnberry Avenue, 2007
This project worked in five locations that evidenced either the process of regeneration or abandonment of an area to which a family photograph originally belonged. The context is therefore shaped by discourses surrounding vernacular family photographs and landscape art photography in particular ways. In this case, family photographs have direct relationships to living subjects and personal histories whose physical traces are on the brink of erasure.

This inevitably leads to photography’s role in mediating memory (Kuhn & McAllister 2006, Hirsch 1997, Williams 1994) and art practices in which vernacular photographs act as prompts for collaborations (Bäckström & Höller 2005, Mir Living & Loving Series 2004, Huyghe & Coupland, 2002). In terms of landscape photography, aesthetic approaches depicting dereliction and ‘aftermath’ scenes (Doherty 2005, Norfolk 2002, Meyerowitz 2001) have been scrutinized for social implications (Campany 2003, Wells 2011).

The contribution of this output therefore operates across critical fields of photography, engages with debates on the subject of collaboration in other ‘socially engaged’ art practices, and discourses connected to social and architectural histories largely associated with British working class communities.

In the Scottish context, extensive demolition programmes of social housing have included the Gorbals in Glasgow. This iconic and infamous area has been the subject of social documentary photography (McKenzie 1990, Marzaroli 1987) and more recent artist-led initiatives that address the role of art and place-making in regeneration projects (Warwick 2006). The failure of postwar social housing schemes, the significance of the removal of tenement and tower blocks from Glasgow’s landscape has been discussed in terms of ‘self-harm’ by both architects and architectural historians alike (Fraser 2010, Rodger 2006), which in turn raise further questions relating to memory erasure, urban planning and myth making (Klein [2008] 1998).
These debates and practices centre on a major city, but are relevant to the locations of Beneath the Surface / Hidden Place. For example, the last of six ‘multi’ tower blocks in Ardler, Dundee, was demolished in June 2007, signalling the final phase of extensive housing regeneration. Initial photography began at this point, and it was clear the collaborators identified this demolition as a physical and psychological landmark, since all had grown up living in multi-storey tower blocks. The names of these buildings form the basis of Ardler’s new street names, evidencing how urban planning attempted to retain connections between housing past and present. This was strikingly different from the project’s other locations. In Doon Valley, local people refer to remnants as their ‘lost villages’ of former mining communities; in Foxbar, Paisley, tenement housing was knocked down in the 1990s, replaced with private housing, and streets renamed.

This context, in different ways, asks what visual strategies were needed to avoid certain pitfalls. Willie Doherty’s memorable critique (1988) of Paul Graham’s depictions of Northern Ireland (1986) makes an important distinction between ‘recoding’ and ‘representing’ landscapes, with ‘recoding’ (in Doherty’s case, Northern Ireland) avoiding obvious signs of conflict that photographers ‘outside’ of location, experience, are likely to depict. Doherty’s notion of recoding the landscape offers a self-reflective position for the practitioner-as-outsider.

This leads to the crucial role of collaboration and authorial control in the project’s images. The importance of a collaborator’s agency as part of the art process is reflected in influential debates within contemporary art (Beech 2008, Bishop 2006) and in new philosophies of photography (University of Warwick’s AHRC Aesthetics After Photography, 2007-10).
In the latter, Dawn Phillips identified how conceptual and post-conceptual artists have valued photography ‘in so far as it brackets artistic agency and authorial control.’ Other more skeptical voices interrogate the artistic connotations of the terms agency, participation and collaboration. Dave Beech argues how collaborators should more radically ‘share authorial rights’ and ‘…make fundamental decisions about key structural features of the work’.

This is demonstrated further in the next section on Methodology. Other critical questions that have emerged – from photographing the erased home to the meaning of the current ubiquity of overlaying the past on the present – are further addressed through a series of key conferences (2009–2013) discussed in the Dissemination section.
The following sequence of images demonstrates how the project developed a transferable methodology, working directly with collaborators, their family photographs, and specific sites where their original photograph was taken. The sequence concentrates on one collaborator, Jan McTaggart, in Foxbar, Paisley. It shows how under the direction of a collaborator, I re-photographed the place as it stands today. The importance of an insider’s memory, knowledge & experience, when looking at a location where all previous reference points have gone, was paramount. The original analogue family photograph was scanned, and now working with this as a digital file, the collaborator would also direct the positioning inside the new landscape image. The resulting digital montages from this methodology, traced the erosion of past realities whilst achieving an unnerving conflation of time and space for viewers. Other methods included archeological approaches to photography, archival research into Ordnance survey maps, press and industrial photography, aspects of social, architectural and oral histories.
Jan McTaggart family photos:
Jan as a girl, photographed outside the window of her tenement home, Foxbar, Paisley 1978
Jan's photograph of home pending demolition, 1992
These photographs were discussed at the first meeting in 2007
This image shows a collaborator’s attempt to map the past on the present using Google Earth. Jan plotted the old street names along with the new. The grey blocks were her way of working out, from memory where tenement blocks used to be, now in relation to private semi-detached housing.
Using this example of a McTaggart family photograph, this sequence will now move to the Map library, for more detailed information before going on location.
Paisley, 1972 and 2006: using maps from the Map Library of Scotland
Jan McTaggart sketched in buildings, backyards into the green space
With this material and her family photographs, we go to the location
Location Photography, Foxbar, Paisley, 2007:
Selection showing Jan orientating herself, remnants of tenement life and areas of significance photographed under Jan's direction
Digital SLR camera on tripod, f22 depth of field
Nicky Bird & Jan McTaggart: Foxbar, Paisley
Back-garden, 3 Annan Drive, 1979? / Springvale Drive, 2007
The output has been disseminated through exhibitions, conferences and publications. This section begins with a timeline listing exhibition venues. Stills, Scotland’s Centre for Photography, has a reputation for showing work of national and international significance; other venues were prime locations with large and broad audiences relevant to the collaborators. The exhibition tour therefore reflected a strategy to reach a community of interests through a high quality research project. A list of international conferences below indicates how the project’s wider questions have been disseminated, from ethical questions raised by collaboration and narratives told informally during the art process (Plymouth, 2009); to questions of belonging and citizenship (Loughborough, 2012), and how Web 2.0 plays a definitive role in the current ubiquity of overlaying the past on the present (New York, 2013). Publication includes a book (Bird, 2010) with selected contributions from collaborators, community advocates, and historians reflecting the project’s process.

Exhibition documentation, conference papers, and publication: see Appendices in physical portfolio
DISSEMINATION

Project timeline

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2007-09</td>
<td>Location photography</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2007</td>
<td>Awards, Creative &amp; Production Artist: Creative Scotland</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2008</td>
<td>Project production</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2008</td>
<td>Awards, major commission: Stills, Creative Scotland</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2008</td>
<td>Launch Exhibition</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2009</td>
<td>Stills, Scotland’s Centre of Photography, Edinburgh (audience figures of 3,793)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2009</td>
<td>Awards, publication: The Kraszna-Krausz Foundation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2009-10</td>
<td>Touring Exhibition Ninewells Hospital, Dundee (2009)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Dick Institute, Kilmarnock, East Ayrshire (2009)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Doon Valley Mining Museum, East Ayrshire (2009-10)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2009</td>
<td>Installation of site-specific permanent public works</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2009</td>
<td>Publication: Ardler Memory Map</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Prestongrange Museum &amp; Morrison’s Haven, East Lothian (2010)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2009-13</td>
<td>Contributions to key international conferences</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2010</td>
<td>Publication: Beneath the Surface /Hidden Place</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2013</td>
<td>Group Exhibition in conjunction with conference ‘Nostalgias - Visualising Longing’</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Normand, Tom. ‘Reconfiguring Documentary Photography in a Globalised World: some contemporary projects from Scotland’. In Studies in Photography, pp 48.57</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Conference papers, guest lectures & artist talks

2009  ‘Returning home, coming back with questions,’ Framing Time & Place: Repeats & Returns in Photography, University of Plymouth, Plymouth, April 2009

2010  Guest Artist, The Future in The Past: 3 Artists on High Rise. CCA, Glasgow, with The Drouth and The Urban Lab. October 2010

‘Artist at the listening Post,’ Transmission: Hospitality, Sheffield Hallam University, July 2010 (paper online, February 2011)

2011  ‘Whither the roots’, Seminar event, Stills, Edinburgh, April 2011

Guest Lecture, Between Nature & Culture: Photography as Mediation & Method
The Photographers’ Gallery, London, June 2012

2013  ‘Saw this and thought of you,’ Remembering, Forgetting, Imagining: The Practices of Memory Fordham University, New York, USA, March 2013

‘Returning to Sites of Erased Homes’
The Place of Memory, UAAC - AAUC, Banff, Canada, October 2013
DISSEMINATION

Authored Published Works Relating to the Output

2010  Beneath the Surface / Hidden Place, Authored publication, edited by Cheryl Connell (Edinburgh: Stills, 2010)

Web Based Media Relating to the Output

http://extra.shu.ac.uk/transmission/papers/BRID%20Nicky.pdf

http://www.h-net.org/announce/show.cgi?ID=185580

http://stillsgallery.myshopify.com/collections/books/products/nicky-bird
Acknowledgements

Instrumental Partners: Stills, Ardler Village Trust, Dundee City Council, East Lothian Council, East Renfrewshire Council, Sanctuary Scotland.

Funders: Stills, Creative Scotland, The Kraszna-Krausz Foundation (publication), Dundee City Council (Memory Map) East Lothian Council (Sited works)

Collaborators: Alexander Brown, Karen Hamilton, Drew Johnstone, Mary Kennedy, Jan McTaggart & George McTaggart, Anne Park, Martin Peter, Mark Scott and Lesley Weir

Community Advocates: Alastair MacLeod & the Ardler Village Trust; Mike Greenlaw, Craigmillar Arts Centre; Elaine Mackie, Doon Valley Mining Museum, East Ayrshire Council; Biddy Simpson & Kate Maynard, Museums & Heritage, East Lothian Council; Dr Melanie Johnson & Dr Mike Cressey of CFA Archaeology Ltd;

Production Support: ~ in-the-fields; Stephen Jackson; Mark Morris of A&M Imaging Services, Colin Parker, all Stills staff including Deirdre MacKenna, Kirsten Lloyd, Cheryl Connell, and Evan Thomas.

Residents of Ardler, Burnton, Dalmellington, and Foxbar.

Individuals for their critical insights: Pamela Brown, Mary Currie, Glyn Davis, Malcolm Dobson, Iain Frame, Laura Gonzalez, Rod Gordon, Arabella Harvey, Joanna Kane, Rosemary Lloyd, Gordon Laurie, Brian MacDonald, Hugh McGhee, Bill McLoughlin, Janet Martin, Anita Mulder, Christina Pieraccini, Alec Ralton, Gary Robertson, Graham Robinson; Peter Ross, Stanley Sarsfield, Ellen Searle, David Stott, Damian Sutton, Karol Swanson, Diane Sykes, Kate Wimpress, John Yeoman, and Yvonne Young.

Archival photographs and other material appear with kind permission:

The John Yeoman photographs reproduced with courtesy of East Lothian Council Museums Service; Jan McTaggart; D.C. Thomson & Co., Ltd. Maps redrawn from mapping supplied by the National Library of Scotland.