

Feminist Past, Feminist Futures

Symposium exploring creative methodologies

The symposium explores the creative contributions of women, past and present, situating them within the context of current artistic practice, writing, and thinking. It aims to recover and celebrate the impact of women's practices and emphasizes the importance of feminist, arts-based research methods.

This event will stimulate debate and idea sharing on how historical and contemporary voices can connect through creative research and draws together artists, curators, writers, and scholars to delve into women's creative legacies.

The symposium will bring together various methods of knowledge formation, including, fictioning, speculation, correspondence, autotheory, oral history, archival, performance, material and visual practices.
