We appreciate the historical importance of the Committee as a cornerstone of the pan-European cooperation in the field of housing and urban development, including its transforming efforts to address housing and urban development challenges in countries with economies in transition. The Committee is the only open pan-European intergovernmental platform to deal with these topics from all the sustainable development dimensions - economic, environmental and social, including cultural aspects. The work of the Committee is aimed mainly at assisting member States in the region to address a number of major housing and urban challenges, including those of an international nature, such as energy-efficiency measures in the residential buildings, and preventing social exclusion due to unaffordable housing for disadvantaged and vulnerable groups of people, etc. All aspects are discussed, and practical steps, guidelines and methodologies are established to effectively support member States in a results-oriented way.
3. We reiterate the importance for governments at all levels and relevant stakeholders to promote the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, the Sendai Framework for Disaster Risk Reduction 2015-2030, the Paris Agreement on Climate Change, the Addis Ababa Action Agenda on Financing for Development, the UN-Habitat Global Housing Strategy, the Geneva UN Charter on Sustainable Housing, the International Guidelines on Urban and Territorial Planning, and the Strategy for Sustainable Housing and Land Management in the ECE Region for the Period 2014-2020. We welcome the adoption of the New Urban Agenda by the Third United Nations Conference on Housing and Sustainable Urban Development - Habitat III.
4. We underline the need to promote coherence, partnership and cross-sectoral links in implementing the above-mentioned global and regional accords. We recognize the role of the United Nations Regional Commissions in the regional level implementation of, follow-up to, and review of, the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development and the New Urban Agenda.
5. We recognize the importance of cooperating with all relevant stakeholders, including local and regional governments and authorities, the United Nations system, other international organizations, including regional and subregional ones, professionals and academia, the private sector, civil society, women and youth

B. We are aware of the following trends:

6. Across the region, the shift to a post-industrial, knowledge economy, and the increasingly important role of services, are changing the structure and character of the economy, introducing demands for enhanced qualifications from the labour market and placing different spatial demands on cities. The knowledge economy and the digital revolution flourish around centres of scientific and educational excellence, and are placing new demands on the physical structure of the cities, including challenges regarding access to affordable housing.

7. Information and communication technologies (ICTs) play a growing role in the development of smart, sustainable cities, including initiatives aimed at sustaining and improving quality of life in urban areas, though this growth presents its own unique set of challenges, such as privacy, security, defence of public interests, etc.

8. Lack of affordability of housing is a critical matter, leading to problems of accessibility to adequate housing, and social exclusion. Social and spatial inequality within and among the cities in the region has been growing, making some high quality urban areas and housing accessible and affordable to only the most affluent. Homelessness and housing exclusion have been increasing. In many countries, furthermore, the recent waves of migration are exacerbating the complexity of the growing inequalities.

9. There is widespread consensus for intergovernmental action on the environment and climate change. In the cities of the ECE region, this will mean an accelerated trend to further decreasing pollution also for improved human health and well-being and more rapidly decarbonizing urban development. These will require adequate environmental regulations and high volumes of public and private investment, while respecting other sustainable development pillars.

10. International standards in housing and sustainable development are driving action towards resilient, connected, spatially- and socially-integrated and compact cities in an equitable partnership with rural areas. There is a trend towards people-centred and integrated planning.

11. These aims and processes will continue to require collaboration, consensus and positive action among national, regional and local governments and all relevant stakeholders. Addressing these evermore complex social, economic and environmental challenges will require new paradigms and a redoubling of efforts from the governance systems to achieve access to decent and affordable housing for all and sustainable urbanization.

C. We invite national, regional and local governments and authorities and all other relevant stakeholders to work together to address the housing and urban challenges, in particular by*(a) Economic dimension

12. Promoting innovative and productive cities to increase their attractiveness, with a focus on innovation, inclusiveness, improvement of youth perspectives, and job creation through entrepreneurial-friendly environments.

13. Promoting access to decent and affordable housing for all. Reducing the economic polarization in growing cities that is the result of housing market imbalances by (a) promoting tenure balanced housing policies and supporting all tenures; (b) addressing housing cost induced poverty and household indebtedness arising from high housing costs; and (c) promoting housing supply, making cities more attractive for people, and addressing housing abandonment in shrinking cities and areas.

14. Promoting the improvement of access to basic services allowing sustainable growth and job creation. Further efforts to achieve the empowerment of women and gender equality are priorities of the urban development policy

(b) Social dimension

15. Strengthening the use of housing and spatial planning and urban design, to also address human well-being, taking into account the needs of the disabled, the elderly and other vulnerable groups, and ensuring participation in planning by all key stakeholders and the inhabitants.

16. Integrating health and mobility concerns in urban planning and policy implementation to reduce congestion and emissions, and to increase physical activity levels to achieve improved human well-being and better health for all.

17. Promoting inclusive cities by addressing the multiple aspects of housing, urban poverty and exclusion, and in particular the aspect of ensuring access to adequate housing for all.

18. Developing and implementing capacity-building programmes for participatory, integrated, sustainable, resilient and affordable human settlement planning while enabling the involvement of all relevant stakeholders

(c) Environmental dimension

19. Promoting green, compact and resilient cities by increasing urban resource efficiency (decreasing the consumption of energy, water and land, and reducing waste and air pollution), a circular economy, sustainable urban mobility solutions, and enhancing green infrastructure and nature-based solutions.

20. Promoting standards of housing provision and building renovation to also increase energy efficiency, supporting the use of renewable energy, and introducing measures for adaptation to, and mitigation of, climate change, to ensure environmentally sustainable and healthy housing supply for all.

(d) Principles of governance

21. Promoting national housing and urban policies conducive to sustainable urbanization, and their translation to locally adequate housing and urban legislation and regulations; promoting the strategic planning of human settlements; and enacting measures at national, regional and local levels to ensure that policies are appropriate for each scale of governance, thereby guaranteeing the most effective results.

22. Stressing that approaches will be specific to the place and context and, to be effective, be as varied as the diversity of the countries, economies, societies and cultures in the region.

23. Promoting smart and sustainable cities and an integrated and holistic approach to planning and managing cities. Promoting the use of ICTs in cities in a way that is mindful of both the opportunities, including increased efficiencies, as well as the challenges, such as privacy, security, defence of public interest, etc.

24. Promoting good urban governance by supporting and building capacity at the local level of local and regional governments and authorities and other stakeholders such as homeowner and tenant associations and housing cooperatives, a key element for the sustainable development of urban areas.

25. Promoting secure tenure and the availability of housing options, including the neutral treatment of tenures, in order to encourage the development of adequate supplies of affordable housing.

26. Focusing on capacity-building and institutional support, especially for countries with economies in transition, to promote policy implementation.

Introducing effective financial systems at the national, regional and local levels, enabling local governments of cities to better plan and implement the programmes elaborated and support the equitable and sustainable development of housing and human settlements.

(e) Regional cooperation for implementation

27. Elaborating country-specific policy guidance and recommendations on challenges related to housing, urban development and land management in the ECE region.

28. Developing in-depth assessments and flagship reports, including a series of Country Profiles on Housing and Land Management.

29. Participating in the relevant global and regional processes to harmonize methodologies, definitions and approaches to data collection in the area of housing, urban development and land management and administration at all levels; supporting development of common terms, language definitions and standards.

30. Promoting dialogue between governments and relevant stakeholders using existing platforms, to facilitate the exchange of experience and the sharing of good practices.

31. Creating regional networks of governments, experts and stakeholders; organizing workshops, study trips and other capacity building activities to promote implementation.

32. Creating synergies using existing platforms and involving relevant programmes, agencies, bodies and other stakeholders, to ensure consistency and complementarity, and allowing effective collaboration on housing, urban planning and land-related issues.

33. Regularly monitoring and following up on the implementation of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, the New Urban Agenda, the UN-Habitat Global Housing Strategy, the International Guidelines on Urban and Territorial Planning, the Geneva UN Charter on Sustainable Housing, the Strategy for Sustainable Housing and Land Management in the ECE Region for the period 2014-2020, and the ECE/ITU Smart Sustainable City Indicators; and, for that purpose, strengthening the capacity of national governments, including their statistical services, and improving mechanisms for information exchange and using monitoring tools that ensure a coherent methodology across the region and global comparability.

D. We confirm our commitment to promote the implementation of the above-mentioned agreements and principles through synergies and cross-sectoral actions. We commit to fostering the global, national, regional and local implementation of the economic, social and environmental actions mentioned above
