Graham Lister: Sellotape Left on the Walls, oil on panel, 30cm x 23cm, 2022

On The Surface

This micro-exhibition features paintings by Graham Lister, Ben Snowden and Jane Walker in which both the substrate and the materiality of paint are fundamental to how the work evolves and is subsequently resolved.

For Snowden and Walker, their expressive mark-making requires a support sturdy enough to withstand energetic and vigorous explorations; while Lister creates a surface smooth enough to allow the paint to glide across, yet capable of holding and recording its trail. Like a good maths exam, all three works show their workings-out, as the artists demonstrate their understanding of how their chosen materials behave. It is curated by Sean Williams.
